DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

Claim 14, and dependent claims 15-24 thereof, is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. The invention claimed as a whole is a combination of data gathering and mental steps. No transformation of subject matter occurs in these method steps. Rather, the invention described is directed to processes of human thinking and data gathering.

"[M]ental processes or processes of human thinking standing alone are not patentable even if they have practical application." Comiskey, 499 F.3d 1365, 1377 (Fed. Cir. 2007). Furthermore, the data gathering steps, even if performed by a machine, are not sufficient to render the subject matter statutory under § 101. See In re Grams, 888 F.2d 835, 839-40 (Fed. Cir. 1989)."

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 14-28 are again rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Cox et al. US Patent No. 7,130,835.

Cox et al. disclose apparatus and methods of use for providing refractive corrections of a patient's eye, the apparatus comprising: a treatment laser generating ablative laser beams; a diagnostic system such as wavefront sensor, aberrometer, pachymeter, topographer, and tonometer; and an electronic data processing and control system for controlling refractive correction of the eye as claimed (see Figures 1-4).

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed on September 12, 2007, have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The applicant argues that US Patent No. 7,130,835 to Cox et al. (hereinafter Cox), which claims priority to Provisional application 60/368,643 (herein after '643), fails to teach "a pachymetry apparatus" as recited in claim 25 of the instant application.

In response to this argument, Provisional application '643 teaches that the diagnostic instrument "consists of one ore more diagnostic devices including, for example, a wavefront sensor, topography instrument, an optical tomography (OCT) system, an ultrasound device, a scanning laser ophthalmoscope, and/or others." See page 19, lines 6-14 of the Provisional application '643. It is known in the art that both the OCT and ultrasound devices are used for measuring thickness of the eye's cornea. Hence, the examiner's position is the reference '643 clearly teaches a pachymetry device although it does not specifically recite the term "pachymetry apparatus."
